

☞ Among the last acts of the Senate was the rejection of Hon. JEROME FULLER, who had been nominated by the President for Judge in Minnesota. We presume this rejection must have been effected mainly by a party vote. Mr. FULLER is a man of very fair ability and legal learning. He practised law for some years in Monroe County, in this State, and represented that district in the State Senate for one or two terms. He advocated, during his Senatorial term, with great earnestness, a proposition to forbid all State Officers from aiding, in any way, the execution of the Fugitive Slave Law, of 1793; although he afterwards changed his views on this subject, and became the first Editor of the Albany Register, when that paper was established for the purpose of making war upon Senator SEWARD, and those who were supposed to sympathise with his views on the subject of Slavery.

We understand that the Senate also rejected the nomination of Hon. JAMES WILSON, of New-Hampshire, for Commissioner of Land Claims for California,—upon what grounds, or by what vote, we do not learn.

The New York Times

Published: September 1, 1852
Copyright © The New York Times